Pahokee drops investigation

By JEFF BROWN

PAHOKEE - Charges levied by a citizens' group against Pahokee Building Inspector Phil Slonaker won't be investigated.

The Pahokee City Council decided to drop the investigation and unseal the records of the city's building department after the Palm Beach County Board of Commissioners decided not to have the county participate in the investigation.

"Whatever has or has not taken place in the past few years is irrelevant at the present time," said Council George Tillis. "As far as the investigation is concerned, I think it's best to be forgotten and move on to better things."

The council adopted his motion to create a Code Enforcement Board according to state statute, but decided not to hire the county to inspect future construction in the city until it had determined if a problem exists.

Council Chairman Jon Moch suggested the council have a workshop with the county building department to help determine if the city has a problem with its building codes.

Two weeks ago, a citizens' group, the Pahokee Civic Pride Association, made several charges against Slonaker and the Pahokee building department.

It charged that Slonaker was allowing construction without required permits and in violation of codes. It also alleged the city lacked an effective condemnation or code enforcement program.

Slonaker was charged with several conflicts of interest in his duties as city building inspector.

Tillis moved that the city hire the county to inspect all future construction, but withdrew the motion after several members of the council suggested the city determine if a problem exists first.

"What's been wrong with the inspection we been having?" asked one citizen in the audience.

"I think we're capable of running this city without the county," said Mayor Duncan Padgett, who added that he's had several "bad experiences" with the county.

Councilman William E. McKinstry said he didn't think that coastal areas operating with the county were in that much better condition than Pahokee.

"They (the coast) got some alleys that are just as damn bad as Pahokee's," he said. "I like Pahokee as Pahokee, not Palm Beach County."

He said the best way to determine how the citizens feel about the proposal is to use the count-

Marina lease may be broken

PAHOKEE - William Joiner, the current leaseholder at the Pahokee Marina, may be told by the city to get out within 120 days.

And if the city council decides to try to break the lease in that manner, Joiner said he'll take his fight to court.

City Attorney Michael Stauder informed the city council early this week that he thinks the city can hold Joiner to an addendum to the marina lease discussed August 10, 1982.

According to Stauder, the council and Joiner at that time verbally agreed to assign the lease to Joiner, who had recently lost his job. If Joiner would agree to a clause allowing the city to cancel the lease with 120 days written notice.

Joiner has since refused to sign that addendum after agreeing to it verbally, and has exercised his option to renew the lease for three years.

He said lawyers he consulted have assured his stand is legal.

Stauder isn't so sure.

"Florida case law supports the contention that written contracts can be modified by subsequent oral agreement of the parties, even though the written contract contains a provision against such modification," Stauder stated in a letter to the council recommending it consider giving Joiner 120 days written notice.

"Although Mr. Joiner subsequently refused to sign an addendum which reduced the parties agreement to writing, it is clear that all of the parties continued to act upon their belief that there was in fact an agreement. I was present at the meeting and the record will show that Mr. Joiner agreed to all of the terms of the above modification, and, at that point, I believe the agreement was effectively amended," Stauder stated.

The council was told early this year that Joiner didn't intend to sign the addendum on the advice of an attorney.

Chamber dinner next Friday

PAHOKEE - The Prince Theatre will again be the site of the Pahokee Chamber of Commerce annual awards dinner Friday, March 18.

According to Chamber President Diane Hall, the event, which starts at 7 p.m., will feature Keith Barrett, a humorist from Nebraska.

Several awards will be presented by master of ceremonies C.R. Wetherington, including the Citizen of the Year and Distinguished Service awards.

Other awards to be presented at the dinner will include the chamber's beautification and holiday decoration awards. Several individuals will be recognized for their contribution to the community.

After the dinner, the chamber of commerce offices on East Main Street will be open to the public. The chamber offices had recently been renovated.

The city council allocated the money to refurbish the offices.

"Not too many local people go into their chambers," said Hall. "It's mostly visitors. This is a chance to get together with our members."

The Pahokee Chamber of Commerce has 70 business and individual members.

Tickets for the dinner are $15 each. Prime rib will be served.

Lake drops to 18.09 feet

The water level in Lake Okeechobee earlier this week had started to drop for the first time this winter.

According to Joe Schweigart, a South Florida Water Management District supervisor, said Monday the lake level was 18.09 feet above mean sea level.

Last week, the level was 18.2 feet.

Schweigart said the district and United States Army Corps of Engineers are trying to drain the lake through the St. Lucie estuary and the Caloosahatchee River.

The corps is pumping the maximum volume of water possible through those two outlets, according to Schweigart.

Water is entering the lake through the Kissimmee River basin, where rains have filled the river and lakes.

Schweigart said the lake will probably rise more in the near future as the recent rains and water flows in the Kissimmee River basin drain into the lake.

Water isn't being back-pumped into the lake anymore, he said.

"We're hoping we can stay ahead of it and continue to bring the lake down," he said.

The district is attempting to bring the lake level to the regulation 15.5 feet above mean sea level by June 1, which is the advent of the hurricane season.

"We'll be in a flood control mode then," said Schweigart.

In Belle Glade, the city owned campground still occasionally experiences flooding due to wind changes, according to city Recreational Director John Rutledge.

Monday night, March 7, winds brought the highest water the old section of the marina had ever experienced, he said, adding that only one camper had moved out of the section.

Everyone else in the old section stayed put and the water went down and everything was lovely," said Rutledge.

High water has already claimed about 50 of the campsites in the old section. There are 135 sites in that section, and 100 in the new section.

Most of the campers in the old section aren't moving, according to Rutledge.

"They're in good shape," he said. "These are old timers. They aren't gonna move out."

In Pahokee, William Joiner, manager of the Pahokee Marina, said break-water still gets flooded at times when winds push the water level up. He said Monday night the ice machines had to be turned down.

The high water flooding the break-water has had an adverse effect on the fishing at the Pahokee Marina, said Joiner. Fishermen can't enter the break water to fish when the winds force the water over the surface of the pier.

He said Monday night the water on the break-water was about knee high.

Most of the campers at the Pahokee Marina are staying, Joiner said, although there a few vacant spots because people are heading back north.

"Let's just hope that we get less rain," said Joiner.

Authority targets abandoned vehicles

PAHOKEE — The Pahokee Housing Authority will be using persuasion and the threat of eviction to rid authority-owned developments of abandoned vehicles.

The authority's board of commissioners Tuesday, March 8, learned from its attorney that the easiest way of removing the abandoned vehicles would be to notify the tenants owning the inoperative vehicles that they are in violation of city or county laws and to give them time to correct the situation.

If the tenant doesn't move the vehicle, the authority can then evict the tenants with written notice, said Attorney Michael Stauder.

Stauder was asked last month by the authority's director, Randall J. Mills, to check into the means of having the vehicles removed.

He said that, according to the Pahokee City Code and the Palm Beach County codes, the property owner and the tenant are both liable for any abandoned vehicle. He said if the authority went to the city or county with abandoned vehicles, the city or county could hold the authority liable.

"As an attorney for the city, I'd have to tell the city council to hold you responsible for the cost," said Stauder, who also serves as city attorney for Pahokee.

He said the city marshall or county sheriff could be made responsible for moving the vehicle, but the cost could then be assigned back to the authority.

The authority operates units in Pahokee and just outside the city in unincorporated areas.

The commissioners also decided to ask the tenants organization to inform tenants with illegally located vehicles that the vehicles are in violation of the law and must be removed.

Proposed Pahokee school location gets attention

PAHOKEE — The Pahokee City Council is seeking information from the Palm Beach County School District on the proposed site for the new Pahokee High School.

The council decided Tuesday night, March 8, to invite Palm Beach County School Superintendent Thomas Mills to a workshop session with the council to discuss the site for the school.

According to Councilman Ronnie Graydon, several Pahokee residents have expressed displeasure with the decision to purchase land on Larimore Road for the new school.

Graydon asked if it was possible to build the new school at the site the school currently sits at on Main Street.

"I would rather see the old dilapidated buildings torn down and build it (the new structure) there," he said. He said a structure could be built on the old football field and students moved into it while work was done on the rest of the school.

He asked City Attorney Michael Stauder if the city's comprehensive plan would take precedence over the school district's plans to condemn the property on Larimore and use it for the new school.

Stauder said he didn't know, but he didn't think the city's comprehensive plan could prevent the school district from using the land for a school.

Graydon said the land the district proposes to use for the school was supposed to be zoned residential according to the comprehensive plan. Councilman William E. McKinstry said part of the land is zoned commercial.

Jack Redding, principal of Pahokee High School, said he would be glad to talk with Graydon at the school sometime and answer any questions he has about the school's location.

Redding also said that agriculture pasture the district already owns on Larimore is too low to build a school on and that it was economically unfeasible to build the school and a highway to that location.

In other business, the city council received a refund check of $24,870 from its workman's compensation protection plan.

According to Paul Kornya, of Milton, Oceania Insurance Agency, the refund, combined with a previous refund of $21,007, represents a refund of 53 percent of the city's $87,870 premium.

The refund was possible because of a safety program the city has adopted, Kornya said.

Opinion

New interest law a bad one

Congress and Administration are feeling the heat from taxpayers upset about the withholding of 10 percent of interest and dividend income that will begin on July 1.

Momentum is building for repeal of this law. In fact, so many savers and investors are complaining that more than 340 Congressmen, including Florida's Rep. Tom Lewis, are co-sponsoring legislation to repeal withholding.

But the Administration has not given up, and in fact has thrown a new and dangerous weapon into the fray: Intimidation.

Financial institutions that have rightly explained how withholding will impact taxpayers and have encouraged their depositors to write to Congress about the plan are now bearing the full weight of the U.S. Treasury's ire.

Donald Regan, Secretary of the Treasury and one of withholding's main proponents, has responded to this activity by our financial institutions with the threat of legislative reprisal. Mr. Regan warned that financial institutions "...run a grave risk of infuriating the tax-writing committee" of Congress if they win their bid to repeal the new withholding rule.

That's intimidation — and that's not the American way.

Mr. Regan and his allies must be worried about the ground swell of grassroots opposition to this unnecessary and costly withholding plan, and he apparently is willing to use any means, even threats, to squelch opposition to this unpopular, poorly conceived and unnecessary law.

But the fight to repeal is far from over. Arkansas Senator David Pryor strongly rebuked the Treasury Secretary's outburst, telling Mr. Regan that "...it is absolutely inappropriate for [S&Ls and banks] to inform their depositors and the general public of the action taken last summer by Congress, action which will have a serious effect on millions of people and millions of taxpayers."

And these 340 Senators and Representatives who are backing withholding-repeal legislation are an indication that at least some people in the federal government listen to their constituents.

The United States League of Savings Institutions points out that the Treasury's own research indicates the taxpayer compliance rate on interest and dividend income already is 97 percent when 1099 reporting is involved. You can't get much better than that.

And of the $4.3 billion the Treasury expects to raise from withholding, only $1.3 billion will be new revenue. The remainder is taxes that are paid when due but which interest and dividend withholding will allow the Internal Revenue Service to collect early, -- an interest-free loan to the government from savers and investors.

Estimates place the cost to collect this tax at 30 to 40 percent of the revenue "gain." By any standard, that's a terribly inefficient way to raise money.

Even so, the pressures are enormous and the battle is difficult. But the people can win. If enough of us complain about withholding, Congress will have to listen.

Write your Congressman and Senators today and make certain they actively support the withholding-repeal effort.

Better control of ATCs needed

Someone complained to me the other day about ATCs being driven on the streets of Clewiston. I agreed that there are ATCs — those noisy three-wheel cycles with the round balloon tires — being ridden on local streets and they are a nuisance.

Not only is the practice illegal, it is also unsafe. It's just a matter of time until one of the young drivers ends up under the wheels of a bigger and heavier vehicle.

Personally, I would hate to see this kind of a traffic accident.

I think the police department should do all it can to discourage ATC traffic on streets.

The primary responsibility for safe operation of ATCs, however, lies with parents. Any adult can see that an ATC is not made for street traffic. The off-the-road tires and lack of turn signals are an indication of something.

If your kid has an ATC, please make sure he operates it safely and in legal areas.

I'm always on the lookout for good news and was pleased to see that "The Independent Professional and Florida Business Journal" Feb. 15 reported that a national study has declared the Sunshine State's manufacturing climate best in the United States.

"As the South rises again, Florida may lead the new industrial revolution," IP staff writer Richard Hayday reported.

The study was prepared by Alexander Grant and Co., a Chicago based firm.

For what it's worth, the unemployment rate was down slightly in Hendry and Glades County from November to December according to the latest issue of "Economic Views."

Economic Views is published by the Southwest Florida Regional Planning Council.

According to their latest figures, unemployment in Hendry County decreased from 14.2 to 13 percent, while Glades County decreased from 9.7 to 9.5 percent.

While the jobless rate is still unacceptably high, any improvement is better than none.

Many still think the national economy is turning around, though unemployment will remain high for a while. Will be interesting to see what impact this has on the elections in the fall of 1983.

Start planning new bridge now

The need for a four-lane bridge at Moore Haven has been pointed up during the past month by the horrendous line-up of vehicles during 30-minute periods the bridge is closed while repairs are being made.

At various times during the day, the stalled lines of traffic have stretched five miles in either direction, the need of many vehicles across the bridge during each of the daylight hours.

At this time, other highway needs certainly take a higher priority — including the four-laning of US 27 from South Bay to the Broward County Line. But considering the time it takes for a highway project to move to the top of a priority list, it is not too soon for Glades County legislators to begin promoting the need to four-lane the Moore Haven bridge.

Editor: At least our local media understand the issues involved with the H-2 program and in cane cutters in Florida's industry. The recent Jack Anderson segment was indeed a shoddy and irresponsible piece which not only damaged the Glades area but serves to lesson the "profession" of journalism.

Your attention to the subject, outlining the many facts about the H-2 program conveniently overlooked by Jack Anderson's crew, was greatly appreciated. Maybe one day an objective and accurate broadcast will appear about the industry's H-2 program...

"AND WHAT NOT"

A lot of people are getting into boats these days and I thought I'd just devote this week's column to basic boating hints as a public service.

The fact that I know less than anyone about boats makes me worth listening to. I know what you should be afraid of. After all, people who know all about boats aren't afraid of anything, so what they know to tell you?

Keep in mind that the family that boats together stays together because you're not allowed to dump them bodies offshore. So your first decision in buying a boat is whether you want a big family size boat or a little boat that can make a fast getaway. But more on that later.

Now boats come in two basic types: with motors or without. Boats without motors are called rowboats (boats with flat bottoms) or canoes (boats for people with flat bottoms).

Boats with motors come small, medium, and large, depending on what size fish you plan to catch. A good rule of thumb is never to catch fish bigger than your boat. Too big a fish can put a hole in your boat and then you'll have to fix it together with belaying pins while you try to make port. And if you think making port is something like making homebrew, you're already in over ty building department as inspector would be to hire the county.

"I'm going to vote against it 'cause I don't think we need a county building inspector, but I hope it passes 'cause I wanna find out what the people think of it. That'll be the best way to find out, to pass it," he said.

He said if the city council isn't satisfied with Slonaker's performance as inspector, it could move him to the water department and hire a new inspector.

"I'll take him," said Bill Cross, city utility director. "Right now, I'll take him."

Several citizens in the audience commented that if the city hired the county as inspector, they would have to go to West Palm Beach to acquire building permits, and that it may take much longer.

"I don't see why you wanna put us citizens through the rigors of a political campaign to get a building permit," said one Pahokee resident.

Tillis said the proposed agreement he saw would have required the city to raise its fees for permits, but it wouldn't cost the city anything. He also said the city could withdraw from the agreement anytime it wanted.

"It may cause some hardship. I don't think it will cause that much trouble," he said.

Tillis withdrew the motion when the council decided to have a workshop session with the county building department.

The council also decided to remove the seal on the building department's records.

"I cannot see the city spending money to hire outside investigator," said Councilman Ron Graydon when he made the motion to unseal the records.

The Palm Beach County Board of Commissioners Tuesday, March 1, turned down a request by the council that the county building department investigate the charges concerning the city building inspector and building department.

The county commissioners acted on the advice of its administrator, John Sansbury.

"Although this department possesses the necessary expertise to accommodate the city's request, and we are flattered that they have a high enough opinion of our operation to solicit our participation, I would be extremely reluctant to accept their request for a number of reasons," Sansbury stated in his recommendation to the board.

He said the study would be detailed and time consuming if done correctly.

"It would be necessary to thoroughly audit their (Pahokee's) building codes... study their code enforcement program and make various inspections in the field. It would be very difficult for us to commit the amount of manpower necessary to accomplish this task, since our staffing levels presently critically low and construction activity is dramatically on the rise in the unincorporated area," Sansbury explained. "Further, it must be remembered that this department is solely supported by the revenues we generate. Consequently, it would be impossible that we be reimbursed for any services that we provide."

Sansbury also said he was concerned that, if the county did agree to investigate the accusations, individuals could accuse the county of being "less than completely objective" because Slonaker is a member of the county Building Code Advisory Board.

"I feel that the most appropriate solution would be for the city to hire a competent private outside consultant to accomplish their investigation and/or solicit participation from the State Ethics Division," Sansbury stated.

He added that the city could ask the county commissioners for permission to hire the county to investigate the allegations at $20 per man hour.

The city had asked for the investigation after a citizens' group, the Pahokee Civic Pride Association, accused Building Inspector Phelix Slonaker of violating the city building codes.

The council at that time ordered the building department's files sealed and asked the county building department to participate in a task force assigned to investigate the allegations.

Devil thinclads fall to Clewiston

Senior Robert Holmes paced the Clewiston High School boys track team to an easy win in the Tigers first meet of the year Friday, March 4, with four individual first place finishes and two new school records.

Holmes also broke Dwight Hatfield's 1967 120 hurdles school record with a time of 14.92 and smashed Ferman Reid's two year old 330 hurdles mark with a time of 40.17.

Clewiston easily outdistanced the six team field with 160 points. Pahokee was second with 91, followed by Okeechobee with 70, LaBelle with 34, John Carroll with 20, and Moore Haven with 19.

"Pahokee was not at full strength," Coach Al Morell said, noting that several Blue Devil athletes are on the basketball team which is seeking a third consecutive state championship.

"We showed all-around strength in almost every event. We should do well in the big meets," Morell said.
